Shayna Noyce is an associate in Newmeyer Dillion's Las Vegas office.

Shayna brings a distinctive combination of courtroom-ready legal skills and deep litigation experience to every client she serves — shaped not only by her legal education, but by more than a decade of hands-on work as a legal assistant and paralegal prior to earning her law degree.

Shayna earned her Juris Doctor from California Western School of Law, graduating second in a class of 166 students. During law school, she served as Executive Editor of the California Western Law Review, worked as a research assistant to a legal writing professor, and taught as a legal writing honors instructor for first-year students. She received Academic Excellence Awards (f/k/a American Jurisprudence Awards) in eleven courses and earned a Distinguished Advocate Award for her oral argument at the William C. Lynch Appellate Competition.

Prior to law school, Shayna earned her Bachelor of Arts in Communications from the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, where she was honored with the David Henry Outstanding Student Writing Award for her capstone scholarly research thesis.
